President's Message

Our Fall Mixer was a huge success! I hope you were there and if you weren't please put our next party on your calendars right now---December 2019. As I went from clusters of chatting colleagues gathered around the standing tables, to the group of prelicensed folks on the patio being introduced by Pat McDermott and welcomed by various members including Judy Zappacosta among others, I was reminded of the first time I attended an MC-CAMFT event. I will never forget the folks who reached out and welcomed me. We are fortunate in being a uniquely friendly, inclusive, supportive and interesting group! And we are winners --congratulations to our raffle winners: Marcia Coulter, Maren Martin and Wanda Jackson. And a big 'Thank You' to all who attended and shared their warm and generous spirits.

Get your calendars out and mark the dates for our TEAM CBT luncheon, Oct 19th with Dr. Dashtban. I am certain her topic will be immediately useful to all of us. I will definitely be there. Jared Phillips, LCC, a relatively new member to our chapter will be holding a Salon on Friday, November 16th, about integrating DBT in private practice. Jared comes with lots of experience in DBT and I look forward to his conversation and suggestions about utilizing the processes of DBT with our clients.

A special thank you to Manfred Melcher who has served on the Board for the past year. Manfred got our Sponsorship program off the ground and has been a pleasure to work with. Manfred, we will miss you. Paula Donnelly, who took over WebMistress after Maren Martin resigned will be leaving the Board as well. Paula helped us see that we needed a new website platform and has hung in there for many months as we clunked through the old website setup. Thank you, Paula for all you've done for us and for prompting us into the modern era with our soon-to-be-live new website.

How about enlivening your professional life a little by serving on our Board? We have several low-stress positions available such as membership, and sponsorship. You could not hope to work with a better group! Give me a call and let us discuss what might fit for your time and talents.

Happy Autumn. May your harvest be bountiful and sweet.

OCTOBER LUNCHEON

How to Make Good Therapy Even Better:

An Overview of the TEAM-CBT Approach Presenter: Katie Dashtban, PhD.

This workshop is intended for all clinicians and mental health professionals. We will review TEAM-CBT, a transdiagnostic and transtheoretical approach to psychotherapy.

Often there is an unspoken disagreement between the agenda of the therapists and those of the clients in terms of what should therapy include and what the goals of therapy should be. For example: an anxious client's agenda might be describing the horrors of a panic attack, while the therapist's agenda might be offering a variety of great suggestions and treatment plans that aim to treat panic disorder. But, what is often left unaddressed is whether the clients really wish to overcome their symptoms (Outcome Resistance) or whether they are willing to roll up their sleeves and engage in what it takes to overcome their symptoms (Process Resistance). In this workshop, we will review the role of (T)esting, a way to measure the vital signs of each therapy session. We will examine the differences between offering accurate (E)mpathy versus advice giving, we will examine ways to address (A)genda Setting while keeping the resistances in mind, and we will explore a variety of (M)ethods that can be incorporated in getting rid of a majority of psychological issues as well as unwanted habits and addictions. We know that the brain plays a key role in our healing work with our clients.

and addictions and relationship conflicts.

Dashtban is a licensed clinical psychologist and the co-founder of Feeling Good Therapy and Training Center. Katie has trained with Dr. David Burns, M.D. at Stanford in the TEAM-CBT approach, which is an advanced Cognitive Behavioral Therapy approach to addressing mood/anxiety issues as well as habits

Katie has been in private practice since 2008 and has been teaching and training clinicians around the country throughout most of her career. She established Feeling Good Therapy and Training Center in 2014, promoting TEAM-CBT as its main modality of practice. She has been training prelicensed clinicians in a supervisory position and has been hiring and training licensed clinicians in a consulting position at the Feeling Good Therapy and Training Center.

In her private practice, Katie specializes as a health psychologist, addressing issues pertaining to chronic pain, cardiac/diabetics/obesity, and reproductive complications.

Katie lives in Santa Cruz with her husband and her twin daughter/son. She enjoys motherhood tremendously, and is an eternal seeker of philosophy, wisdom and spiritual growth.

NOVEMBER SALON

Balancing Opposites: DBT and Private Practice

We know that the brain plays a key role in our healing work with our clients.

Dialectical Behavior Therapy (DBT), an evidenced-based treatment model that teaches people how to stop making things worse and create a life worth living, typically consists of five modes that constructs the standard DBT program. Given that structure, mental health clinicians often bypass the strategies and wisdom of the skills because of what seems to be a complex model.

In this Salon, Jared Lee Phillips, LPCC (CA Lic. # LPCC3587), NCC, and DBT-trained, will lead a discussion that explores the benefits and barriers to integrating DBT theory and skills in private practice and how to engage in DBT-informed therapy.

The Salon will take place on Friday, November 16 from 10am to 12pm at 415 Figueroa Street in Monterey.

COUPLES CORNER

Bi-monthly musings by Cristin DeVine, certified Imago Relationship Therapist

Embracing Change

I remember that, as a child, one of my mother's favorite sayings was, "all you can really depend on is change." I didn't exactly feel comforted by her words at the time, but as an adult I see that there was wisdom in her words.

As therapists, we are consistently tracking the developmental shifts, evolutionary leaps, growth, and changes, both expected and unexpected, in our clients. When we work with couples it becomes evident that as the individual changes, the relationship must change as well.

I think it's a miracle (or at least a major act of grace) when a couple can navigate the implicit growth and change of two individuals throughout the lifespan and stay together – happily that is. I have a friend who is currently stepping into her elderhood. After many years of running a successful business and achieving the major benchmarks of status according to our culture, she finds herself longing to drive her camper to wild places and listen to the big silence. She longs to hold up a sign in rural Iowa that says, "Are you ready to have the healing conversation?"

Is this developmentally appropriate according the stages of the life cycle? You bet! Is this what ego dissolution looks like? Of course! Is her husband nervous and resistant? No doubt!

To say "yes" to lifelong partnership is to say "yes" to all the unknowns, all the hidden surprises, and all the change that comes with inevitable growth. In "Letters to a Young Poet," Rainer Maria Rilke wrote:

"For one human being to love another; that is perhaps the most difficult of all our tasks, the ultimate, the last test and proof, the work for which all other work is but preparation. I hold this to be the highest task for a bond between two people: that each protects the solitude of the other. This is the miracle that happens every time to those who really love: the more they give, the more they possess."

I believe that to hold our partner's development and growth potential in highest regard is what Rilke means by "that each protects the solitude of the other." To love with this capacity is to say, "I bless you on this journey even if it takes you away from me for a while." We cannot hold our partner captive by encouraging them to remain one dimensional, just because we like that particular dimension, rather than developing all facets of their wholeness.

As therapists, how can we best encourage our clients to embrace change in their partners and relationships as an opportunity to develop their own untapped potentials? In doing so, we help diffuse unnecessary conflict and create opportunities for them to become lovers of connection, lovers of change, and lovers of solitude.

BOOK REVIEW:

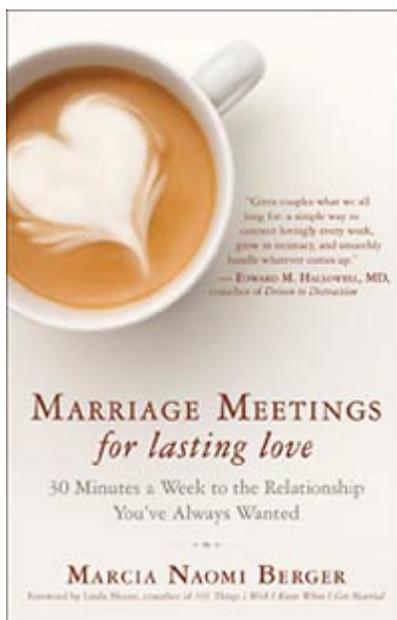

Marriage Meetings for Lasting Love: 30 Minutes a Week to the Relationship You've Always Wanted

by Marcia Naomi Berger, MSW, LCSW

Reviewed by Dorie Rosenberg, LMFT

Marcia Naomi Berger's book about Marriage Meetings makes this an occasion for connection more than a technique. Berger has presented, in a very approachable way, how and why Marriage Meetings enhance a couple's relationship over a lifetime.

The author did a fantastic job of illustrating softening one's request for change until the request comes in a form that one's spouse is willing and able to make. Most people have the tendency to get louder or manipulative rather than softer and considerate of their spouse's nature.

Case studies throughout the book further illustrated how the complex emotions of relationships can be worked to resolution. It's clear that holding Marriage Meetings will help a couple continually feel more happily bonded, which would make living together for life a positive, precious experience. I have recommended this book to my clients, with good results.

The heart does not have to close in order to define a limit.

Setting boundaries is often challenging ... and it is an essential part of bringing authenticity into relationships.
 For someone to trust a “yes”, there has to be trust that a “no” will be spoken when that’s what’s true.

This course engages guided meditation, teaching, discussion and experiential practices as we discover the strength and depth of compassion that can arise in skillfully setting boundaries.

Impermanence: Vulnerability and Mortality

 529 Central Ave., Ste. 201A, Pacific Grove,

Impermanence:

The fact that no thing, no body, no where will last forever.

Vulnerability:

The feeling that arises when we really get it that no thing, no body, no where will last forever.

Mortality:

The circumstance that we all face when no thing, no body, no where will last forever.

OK, nothing lasts. Now what?

What happens when we allow ourselves to open our hearts and minds to impermanence, vulnerability and mortality? What are the gifts? How do we benefit from acknowledging impermanence as a fact of life? How do we benefit from being vulnerable? How do we benefit from accepting mortality? This course engages guided meditation, teaching, discussion, and creativity as we explore the mysteries, resistances, & teachings of conscious relationship with impermanence, vulnerability & mortality.
